DRAMA AT POLI'S

Manager Poli will inaugurate the summer season of stock productions at Poli's, Monday next, when the Poli Stock Company will make its bow to the theatre-going public of this city

Greater and grander than ever the company is promised to be for the coming season and the return of many of the favorites, headed by Alice Flemng and John E. Ince, with a most caable supporting company, augurs wel or the rare dramatic treat in store of the playgoing public. By means of a voting contest the patrons of Poll's have selected the Clyde Fitch comedy "Girls" for the opening production, and it will be presented on a scale of magnificence not excelled by the orignal company which ran for two years at Daly's Theatre, New York.

"Girls" is the Clyde Fitch comedy originally produced at Daly's Theatre, New York city, where its novelty of heme and brilliancy of dialogue caused the Manhattan critics to unanimously hail it as the brightest work ever offered by the famius playwright. It scored a very decided triumph with the public, and ran an entire season to enormous business and were revived the following year for another run with no diminution of interest. The Messrs. Shubert, through special arrangement with whom Manager Poli will produce the play, have now four companies on tour with it, playing to ment season, promises to be one of splendid business in the South and

The first scene of the play shows a studio occupied by three bachelor girls, who have vowed eternal hatred The leader of the of useless man. trio, Pamela Gordon, is a stenog-rapher; the youngest, Violet Landslowne, is an illustrator, and also does typewriting for a living; and the third, Kate West, is a free lance writer with aspirations for the stage. They owe for rent of their apartment and have corrowed fifteen dollars from their airshaft neighbor, Lucille Purcelle, an elocutionist. The janitor is inclined to drink and disrespect, the steam pipes are typical of flats, and they have a near neighbor who is taking vocal lessons. The studio is furnished with one bed, a couch and a Morris chair, decidedly uncomfortable. Pamela has been unsuccessful in finding a position, Kate has had a promise of a trial at acting, an Violet is enjoying several days of indolence. Shortly after the play begins Pamela has a discussion with the fanitor and comes out second best. The postman orings a letter to Pamela with the offer of a position with Sprague & Holt, leading attorneys, and he is pronounced a welcome visitor. The girls prepare for bed and are in the midst of a dispute as to whose turn it is to occupy the Morris chair when the door bursts open and a "man" enters. He has been having dinner with a married woman whose elderly husband returns unexpectedly. Pamela orders him to leave and he is finally induced to crawl into the window across the air shaft by means of a poard provided by Pamela. The girls then do the famous disrobing scene, quiet their nerves and tuck hemselves into bed.

The second act takes place in the office of Sprague & Holt and finds Pamela as a stenographer and Violet as her assistant. Being unable to impress the senior partner, Sprague, with the dignity of her position, Pamela resigns in the middle of the forenoon just as the junior partner re-He proves to be the man of turns. the night before episode and is already in love with Pamela. Mrs. Dennett, by cross breeding by a California horyoung and silly, calls to start divorce proceedings against her husband and Mr. Dennett, old and unusually silly, calls for a like purpose. Their meeting and Violet's too liberal taking of dictation leads to the discharge of the duo with two weeks' salary due. The last act of course rights matters and there is a happy ending.
